WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 30, 1879.

VICTORIA AT BAIM RAL -One naturally cannot belp making inquiries about the Queen when staying in the neighborhood. It is a neighborberhood in which she goes about in a more free and spontaneous way than anywhere else. She could hardly go about at Windson and Osborne as she does at Balmoral. The Queen is always dressed in a very plain and quiet fashion, which is itself a rebuke to the extravagant "dressiness" of the present day. She will enter very humble shops to order to make very small purchases. These purchases are mainly intended as gifts to the poor, chiefly the poor in her own service. the selects the articles, but never asks the price. The prices charged are exactly the same as to ary one else. Besides this, the Queen regularly visits the houses of the cottagers. Some touching instances of this are given in the Highland Journal. "Really." she naively remarks, "the affection of these good people, who are so very herry and so happy to see you, taking interest in everything, is so very touching and interest-

I heard a very pleasing anecdote of the Queen one day on the coach top as I went from Brae-mer to Blairgowrie. We passed a house which had belonged to a decessed general officer, a barenet, who had seen good service in the Na-poleonic wars. He had built a nouse, an exact representation of Longwood, where Nopoleon died. On a mound close by the gate he had erected a stand, where waved flags commemo-rative of all the different battles in which he had been engaged, and in the centre the flag of Waterico. The Queen passed by, and amid all the details of her traumphant progress she omitted to notice this peculiar array of flags.

The old General was sorely nurt by this ornission and bemoaned it greatly. He, however, had friends at Court, and one of them ventured to speak to Her Majesty on the subject. The Queen, in the most prompt and gracious way. was anxious to gratify the old soldier and re-lieve his mind. When she was next about to pass that rose she caused an intimation to be given to him that the flags should be displayed as before, and that then he should fall into her cavalende and ride before her as one of her bedy guard to Balmoral —London Society.
